Artist, designer, and educator Nathan Neufeld was born in Asheville, NC, and graduated from the Kansas City Art Institute with a major in Ceramics in 2015. While in school Nathan pioneered the use of digital technologies at KCAI to work in concert with traditional processes. Upon KCAI's launch of their studios for art and technology, Beals Studios, Nathan was brought in to lead the studio.

Nathan has exhibited nationally and internationally in venues such as The San Angelo Museum of Fine Arts and The International Ceramics Center in Kecskemet, Hungary. He has created works for those such as the Kemper family, Manica Architecture, NCECA, the City of Riverside, and the Kansas City Art Institute. Recently he created an installation for The Monarch in Kansas City, which was featured in Architectural Digest as one of eight most stunning chandeliers in the world.
